MISS KATHERINE VAN INGEN WED TO MR. GEORGE F. DOWNEY, JR.

Was 'New York Herald' Correspondent in Civil War.

Funeral services will be held to-night in his home for Julian K. Larke, aged 92, of 17 Granite street, Brooklyn, who was a correspondent for THE NEW YORK HERALD during the civil war. He died Tuesday. Mr. Larke's articles of the war, dealing to a great extent with Gen. Grant, led Derby & Miller, publishers, to request him to write a book on "Gen. Grant and His Campaigns." This Mr. Larke did, covering the period between 1862 and 1865. In the book Mr. Larke asserted that Gen. Grant's name originally was Hiram Ulysses and not Ulysses Simpson Grant, as recorded. Mr. Larke's book, in print, was quoted before the Court of Appeals at Albany twelve years ago in connection with Grant's name. Mr. Larke was born in London and came here more than sixty years ago. He was a member of New Tree Lodge, No. 461, P. and A. M. He leaves a wife, Mrs. Larke, and a son, Mr. George F. Downey, Jr., who is to-day in Cyprus Hills Cemetery.

WOMAN'S ART SCHOOL SHOWS WORK OF YEAR

Fashion and Other Designs Exhibited at Cooper Union.

At a reception held at Cooper Union last evening there was placed on view the work which has been done during the last year in the Woman's Art School. The great part of this exhibit consists of work in design fashion, illustration and practical drawing which is required in the artistic commercial course.

Craftsmanship of an amateurish nature is quite lacking in the exhibit and the tone of the show throughout savors of professionals rather than students who have arrived in three years and less.

The design classes under Miss Ethel Williams show a pleasing variety of work, including leather and design, long wheel base, colored ground, leather and wall paper, as well as sketches for interior decoration. This work throughout shows a complete knowledge of the art of design. The work of the bookkeeping class, under the direction of Joseph Cummings Chase, a series of posters depicting cases seem to be a natural and logical development of the work of the bookkeeping class. The work of Miss Traphagen's students in costume design as well as maintained its high standard of excellence.

Two decorations in the mural painting exhibit have had the distinction of winning prizes in the Beaux Arts competition. Miss Storer, a student in the first prize and Miss Ernie Lange the second.
